The Company does not control such Liquidity Provider, and it is in the Company's sole discretion to decide with which Liquidity Provider it shall engage. The Company also may hedge the client's positions to another Liquidity Provider within the Company's pool of execution venues. Clients' Funds may be transferred to the respective Liquidity Provider.
- The Client may request the Company to withdraw any of Client Funds that are not securing any Open Position(s) or Credit, and the Company will process such withdrawal request immediately and no later than permitted under applicable law and its policies. Without derogating from the above, the withdrawal of funds may be delayed due to delays originating with the specific Liquidity Provider holding such funds (and only in the amount so held), and the Company will not be responsible for such delays.
- Subject to the regulatory requirement with which the Company is required to comply and unless otherwise decided by any governmental or legal authority, it is agreed that if the delay in processing the withdrawal of funds is caused by an event of bankruptcy of a Liquidity Provider, bank or payment institution, the Client shall be eligible for the withdrawal of funds based on the following formula: I. Total of the Client's trading equity with the Company multiplied by the following fraction

I.e., the nominator is the funds lost due to the bankruptcy of the Liquidity Provider, and the denominator is the total trading equity of the Company to its clients.
- Until the Client's obligations are satisfied, the Company shall have a general lien on Client Funds held by the Company, its affiliates, or its nominees on the Client's behalf. In the event of any outstanding debt, the Company may, at any time and its sole discretion, upon written notice to the Client, merge all and/or any Client Accounts opened in the Client's name, consolidate the Equity in such accounts, offset any amounts held on behalf of, and/or to the credit of, the Client against any Client obligation to the Company, and/or merge any Client Account with the Company.
- Margin includes the required margin for maintaining an Open Position ("Margin Requirement"), Which is based on
 - i. The opening Margin as determined in the relevant Financial Instrument contract specifications; and
 - ii. Any additional amount the Company believes is prudent to require in its sole discretion.
- Margin Requirement is subject to change at any time in the Company's sole discretion, provided that the Company shall reasonably notify Client in advance of any changes in its Margin Requirement. The client must always maintain the Margin Requirement in the Client's Open Position. Anytime the required margin is not maintained, the Company will liquidate any or all open positions in the client's account.
- The Company may keep client funds with a liquidity provider inside or outside of SVG on the Client's behalf. In the event of insolvency and/or any other equivalent failure of any such entity outside of SVG, the Client's Funds may be treated differently than they would be if they were kept in a segregated account in SVG. This is because the laws and rules that apply to these kinds of organizations outside of SVG may differ from those in SVG. Unless the Agreement says otherwise, the Company is not responsible for the insolvency, actions, or omissions of any third party mentioned in this paragraph.
- The money that the Company will transfer to the liquidity provider may be held in an omnibus account and may not be separable from the liquidity provider's or client's funds. In the event of insolvency or any other equivalent action involving that liquidity provider, the client will be at risk that the funds received by the company from the liquidity provider will not be sufficient to meet the client's rights for the relevant account. On behalf of the client, the company may only have an unsecured claim against the liquidity provider. The Company does not assume any obligation or responsibility for any consequent losses unless expressly mentioned in the Agreement.

➤ Liquidation of Account and Deficit Balances:

- a. In the event:
 - i. If an Event of Default as per this Agreement; or
 - ii. If the Company reasonably determines that any collateral deposited to protect the Client's Account is inadequate, regardless of current market conditions and quotations, to secure the Client's Account, the Company may immediately take one or more of the following actions:
 - satisfy any obligation Client may have to the Company (either directly and/or by way of guarantee or suretyship) out of any of Client's Funds or property in the custody or control of the Company; and/or
 - close all Open Positions; and/or
 - cancel any or all outstanding Orders, Transactions or commitments made by or on behalf of Client; and/or
 - establish a spread or straddle that, in the Company's sole judgement, may be advisable to protect and/or reduce existing positions in the Client's Account.
 - b. The Client shall always be responsible for paying any unpaid balance on its Account upon the Company's demand, and the Client shall always be liable for any outstanding balance on its Account if the Account is liquidated in whole or in part by the Company and/or by the Client. The sum owed by the Client to the Company, along with all other arrears and unpaid liabilities of the Client, including but not limited to all enforcement and collection expenses, must be paid promptly upon demand.
- Account Currency - The Client may hold EUR and/or USD and/or other available currency - denominated accounts with the Company. The Client chooses the account's currency upon opening the corresponding account and at a later stage via a request in writing as per clause nineteen of this Agreement.

Deposits and Withdrawals

The Client may deposit and withdraw by either a debit/credit card, by an e-wallet, or by making a wire transfer. The account used for the deposit will be the account where the funds withdrawn shall be returned. Cash deposits are prohibited.

- For Wire Transfers, including but not limited to mobile and/or internet banking facilities offered by the client's bank, the Client's personal account must be used – an account at a bank in the country of the Client's permanent residence – preferably.
- For e-Wallet's use, the Client should refer to the transaction clauses of the respective payment service provider and/or gateway and/or Electronic Money Institution. The Client may deposit funds to the Account using the e-Wallet and withdraw part or all his balance.
- The same procedure also applies in the case of deposits through debit/credit cards. Please, be informed that if the Client's card currency differs from the Client's account currency, a deviation of the withdrawn amount from the deposited one may occur due to exchange rate fluctuations and other charges by the payment service provider.
- Internal audits from the internal team of the Company take place in every transaction relating to the funding department, i.e., Department(s) responsible for the deposits and the withdrawals in and from the Client accounts, respectively, as required to be compatible with the company's risk appetite and assessment.

- The Company maintains the right to reject a deposit and/or a withdrawal request if the Client has performed any unauthorized and/or illegal activity and/or if the client did not satisfy the relevant conditions as mentioned in more detail in the Company's Anti-Money Laundering, Terrorist Financing and K.Y.C. Policy & Procedures. The same applies to cases where the Client act without good faith towards his/her contractual obligations with the Company.
- Throughout this agreement, the client may make any number of deposits into the client's account. The Company will deduct the appropriate amount if the banking organization (or other intermediary participating in the procedure) that holds the funds imposes any transfer fees or additional costs on the Company. For deposits, the Company will only accept electronic transfers (where the client is the sender) that it thinks are okay.
- Third-party or anonymous funds payments in the Client Account are generally not Accepted, except in exceptional circumstances according to the Company's discretion.
- If funds are credited into the Client's Account, and if the Client knows or should in good faith know that such funds were credited erroneously, the Client must notify the Company immediately of such deposit(s) and return the funds to the account as specified by the Company.
- The Client agrees that the funds will only be deposited into their account if the Company is confident that the sender of those funds is the Client or their authorized representative. If the Company is unconvinced of those mentioned above, it can reject the funds and return them to the sender using the same transfer method as when it first received them, less any transfer fees or other costs incurred by the Company. In this regard, the Client hereby attests that any funds placed in their account(s) with the Company are solely the Client's property and are free and clear of any third-party claims. The Company will not be held responsible if any third-party rights are attached to the Client's deposited funds.
- Following receipt of a withdrawal request, the Company will proceed with the requested withdrawals of the Client's funds, except where Abusive Trading, Prohibited Conduct, or a breach of these Terms is identified, in which case the Company's rights under the Abusive Trading and Account Recalculation provisions shall apply.
- The Client agrees that any withdrawal of a portion of the requested funds must be completed using the same remitter that the Company utilized to first receive the requested funds, less any transfer fees or other costs incurred by the Company.
- The Company maintains the right to reject a withdrawal request from the Client if the Client requests a specific transfer method; in such case, the Company may offer an alternative.
- If the following conditions are satisfied, the Company will process the Client's request to withdraw money from the Client Account within three (3) Business Days of receiving it:
 - The withdrawal instruction(s) included all necessary information (including but not limited to: Account Name, Amount, Currency, and Bank Account details); and
 - The receiving bank account is that of the Client; and
 - The Client's free Margin exceeds the amounts specified in the withdrawal instructions, including all payment charges at the point of making transfer instructions and
 - All the conditions set in our Anti-Money Laundering, Terrorist Financing and K.Y.C. Policy & Procedures have been satisfied.
- Only the Client will initiate withdrawals. The Company will not execute withdrawal requests to any third-party or anonymous account.
- The client is aware that the withdrawal request processing could take a while. To prove the request is legitimate, the corporation has the right to request further information, documentation, or both. If the business believes a request is invalid, it can reject it.

- The Client will bear all payment and transfer charges, and the Company shall debit the Client's Account for these charges.
- Client Categorization – The Company shall treat and provide all its clientele with the highest service. A Retail Client may request to be categorized as a Professional and the opposite – but this will finally stay under Company's discretion.

Costs

- All costs (including but not limited to Spreads, Swaps, Commissions and other related service and/or financial instrument costs) are found in our Online trading facility, and they may be altered, from time to time, after a notification is given electronically by the Company to the Client. Swaps, if any, and Overnight Rollover charges may be updated daily without explicit notice to the client. The client will have access via the Online trading Facility to view the upcoming Swaps and/or Rollover charges if any.
- The provision of the Services is subject to the payment of Commission, Swaps, spreads from the Client to the Company, and/or any other applicable costs, taxes, fees and charges as agreed by both parties from time to time ("Commission"). In consideration for providing the Services, the Client must pay, and the Company must receive the Commission under the terms and conditions of this Agreement.
- Swaps and overnight Rollover charges are usually calculated based on the company's charges from its Liquidity Provider(s). In case of excessive charges either in favour or against the Client, the Company may alter affected transactions.

No-Swap (Islamic) Accounts

The Company provides No-Swap (Islamic) Accounts for CFD trading, structured in accordance with the principles of Islamic finance and available exclusively to clients who cannot receive or pay swaps due to their religious beliefs. No swap or rollover charges are applied for the first five (5) calendar days that a trade remains open. Following this initial period, a management fee will be applied to each open position. Clients wishing to convert a standard trading account into a Swap-Free Account must first close all active positions and submit a duly signed request accompanied by any required supporting documentation. The Company reserves the right to evaluate each request at its discretion, to decline any application without providing a reason, and to revoke Swap-Free status at any time in cases of misuse, abuse, or violation of trading terms, including but not limited to arbitrage, hedging, or fraudulent activity.

Chargebacks

- By signing up to use our services, you consent first to contact us to work out any issues before asking or insisting on a refund or chargeback from your bank or credit card company. This applies both during and after using our services.
- Our goal is to stop credit card fraud, and all fraud will be investigated and prosecuted, if necessary, to the greatest extent of the law in your local jurisdiction, without exception. Additionally, the Company will file a civil lawsuit in your local court to recover any lost money resulting from the fraud, including company losses, legal costs, research expenses, lost wages, and employee downtime.
- To trace any fraudulent transaction endangering our ability to provide services, we use sophisticated risk-detecting modelling. Upon discovery, the Company must immediately cancel fraudulent transactions. The same applies to a stolen payment card, which will also cause the immediate cancellation of any active transactions connected in any manner to it. Additionally, we caution that the Company aggressively uses outside, cross-industry resources, such as global fraud blacklists, to block fraudulent individuals from ever accessing our online trading facility.
- Fraudulent credit card chargebacks occur when there is a need for a sincere attempt to collaborate with us to fix any issues with your deposit. All pointless chargebacks take our staff members' time away from their regular tasks, which is expensive for the Company. To lessen your risk exposure, the Company will detect suspicious activity related to a deposit being made in an Account. As a result, the deposit will be marked with a "Suspended" status, and the Company will perform fraud detection checks on the deposit as soon as possible. During this time, access to your Account may be restricted.

- We often complete reviews the same day, but some deposits with more significant potential risks might take longer since our Compliance Department needs to do even more thorough fraud detection checks. As an additional safety measure, we could contact you directly. The Company shall immediately cancel the transaction, and the Company shall return the money to the credit/debit card used to make the original deposit if we believe that it is high-risk and/or does not comply with our fraud and security practices.
- Additionally, under these circumstances, we reserve the right at any time to close any and/or all your Accounts with our Company at our sole discretion. The Company will cancel all open orders connected to the fraudulent credit card and/or Account.
- The Company reserves the right to send reminders or take debt collection measures at any time, including, but not limited to, providing a mandate to a debt collection agency or solicitors to pursue the claim against the Client in court. Furthermore, we have the right to bill the Client for any reasonable costs associated with debt collection or enforcement actions.
- We take fraud seriously at ConnexFX. We log IP strings on all deposits made in our accounts. Any orders returned as chargebacks because of fraud may be fully taken to a court of law in your area.
- A chargeback in violation of the abovementioned obligations is a material breach of this Agreement.

Dormant Accounts

- A trading account held with Connexfx in which no activity has been recorded for ninety (90) consecutive days—including no trades placed, no positions opened or closed, and no deposits made—shall be classified as a “Dormant Account.”
- A Dormant Account Fee of USD 5 (five United States Dollars) per month will be deducted from the available balance of any Dormant Account. This fee will continue to be applied on a monthly basis until either:
 - account activity resumes; or
 - the account balance reaches zero.
- If the account balance reaches zero, the trading account will be permanently removed, closed, and/or deactivated from the Online Trading Facility.
- The personal data, documentation, and other information associated with Dormant Accounts will be retained in accordance with the Company’s Anti-Money Laundering (AML), Counter-Terrorist Financing (CTF), and K.Y.C. Policy & Procedures, as well as the Privacy Policy, and in compliance with applicable legal and regulatory requirements.

Removal of Inactive Newly Created Trading Accounts

Trading accounts that show no activity within 30 days from the account opening date - including deposits, withdrawals, internal transfers, or trading activity, will be automatically removed from the system

Position Limitation and Extraordinary Events

- The Company can limit the size and/or the total number of Open Positions the Client may Acquire or maintain at the Company’s Online Trading Facility.
- The Company can refuse to accept any order placed or to be placed by the Client.
- The Client agrees that the Company is authorised to reclaim any trading profits the Client obtains through the trading of delayed or inaccurate pricing or any other unauthorised activity.

Leverage

- Leverage is an investment technique to use borrowed money, precisely the use of various financial instruments and/or —borrowed capital, to maximize an investment's potential return while accepting multiple times the risk of inverse price movement compared to the selected price direction for the asset via the investment decision.

- Leverage is the same as the borrowed purchasing power of a firm or an investor or "artificial purchasing power". When a company, property or investment is "highly leveraged," that implies the item has more debt than its equity and/or assets. Investors use leverage to achieve higher returns on assets, but heavily leveraged positions make unsustainable losses highly probable.
- Leverage is the use of borrowed funds for trading or investing purposes. Leverage is an artificial purchasing power the Company provides to the Client to invest in a financial instrument. Leverage is expressed in a ratio and percentage form, i.e., 1:100 or 1%, which is the same. Leverage is the amount of margin necessary to open or later to maintain a position open; thus, this type of trading is known as "Margin Trading".
- Essential formulas:
 - ✓ Leverage equals the Notional value divided by the Market Value
 - ✓ Notional value equals the Contract Size multiplied by the Underlying asset's price
 - ✓ The hedge Ratio equals the Cash Exposure Risk divided by the Notional Value of the Related Underlying Asset.

Leverage Adjustment

Connexfx reserves the right, at its sole discretion, to review and adjust the leverage applied to any Client's trading account without prior notice. Leverage may be modified based on factors including, but not limited to, account equity, trading behavior, instrument exposure, and prevailing market conditions.

1. Dynamic Leverage Based on Equity

- Leverage will automatically adjust based on the Client's equity, as follows:

Equity < $15,000 – up to 1:1000

$15,000 ≤ Equity < $30,000 – up to 1:500

$30,000 ≤ Equity < $50,000 – up to 1:400

$50,000 ≤ Equity < $60,000 – up to 1:200

Equity ≥ $60,000 – up to 1:100

These changes are applied automatically when account equity exceeds the corresponding thresholds. Clients are responsible for monitoring their margin levels accordingly.

2. Temporary Leverage Reduction During High-Impact News

To align with market best practices and mitigate risk during periods of extreme volatility, ConnexFX will apply a High Margin Requirement (HMR) on XAU/USD (Gold) during certain economic news events.

- During high-impact events (e.g., NFP, CPI/PPI, central bank rate decisions, GDP releases, geopolitical escalations), the maximum leverage on new Gold positions will be capped at 1:300.
- This restriction applies 5 minutes before and 8 minutes after the event release time.
- The HMR applies only to new trades opened during the event window. Existing positions opened before or after this window remain unaffected.
- After the HMR period, leverage and margin requirements revert based on the Client's standard account leverage and equity level.
- All account types, including Micro accounts, are subject to this policy. Accounts already operating at or below 1:300 leverage are not affected.

Clients acknowledge that leverage adjustments, whether due to account dynamics or market conditions—are essential for maintaining a fair and stable trading environment. ConnexFX shall not be liable for any resulting losses due to these adjustments.

3. Leverage Adjustment During Market Rollover

To manage risk during periods of reduced liquidity and increased volatility associated with daily market rollover, ConnexFX may apply a temporary leverage restriction across the Client's account. The Company reserves the right to apply such leverage restrictions without prior notice where deemed necessary.

During this period, the maximum available leverage on the Client's account will be reduced to 1:300

This restriction applies:

- One (1) hour prior to market rollover close; and
- Thirty (30) minutes following market rollover open;
- From Monday to Friday.

This measure applies to all instruments and affects the Client's overall account leverage, which may impact margin requirements, free margin, and margin level. This restriction applies to both new and existing positions due to its impact on overall account leverage.

As a result, Clients acknowledge and accept that such adjustments may lead to margin calls and/or automatic liquidation (stop-out) of positions.

Clients are solely responsible for monitoring their account, maintaining sufficient margin, and managing their exposure during these periods.

ConnexFX shall not be held liable for any losses, including but not limited to losses resulting from margin calls or stop-outs, arising from the application of this leverage restriction.

Leverage conditions will revert to the Client's standard account settings outside of the specified rollover period.

Margin, Initial margin, and maintenance margin

- In addition to the definition mentioned above, Margin is the number of funds a Client must have in the Account, and engage them in the form of collateral, to open and/or maintain a position.
- Margin is the necessary value a client must hold in his Account to initiate an order by collateralising the requested percentage of the total price of the investment. The initial margin is the percentage of the purchase price that must be covered by the Client's own funds at the initial phase of the trade, i.e., placement of the order to seek execution. The initial margin is the initial margin required to initiate/open a transaction or send an order for execution, and the maintenance margin is the necessary amount to maintain the transaction active. Margin calculation varies on the leverage ratio. I.e., if the leverage ratio is 1:100, then 1% of the investment's value is required to initiate it.
- "Margin Requirement" refers to the amount of money required to open a position depending on the margin rate and the position's actual market exposure using the following formula:

Margin Requirement = (Lots multiplied by Contract Size) multiplied by Margin Rate

- "Leveraged Trading" or "Margin Trading" means that clients can trade amounts significantly higher than their deposit.
- "Maintenance Margin" refers to the minimum amount of equity required for maintaining a position open. At ConnexFX, the Maintenance Margin is currently 100% unless agreed differently between the Parties.

If your Maintenance Margin reaches 100%, your positions will start liquidating from the position with the highest losses.

- "Margin" in the trading platform is the sum of Margin Requirements for all open positions.
- "Margin Level" is a percentage derived by dividing total account Equity with the total Margin as the following formula: Margin Level = Equity / Margin
- A "Margin Call" appears when the client's Margin Level is equal to or below 150% unless agreed differently between the Parties, and the client needs to either close some open positions and/or deposit more funds in their account to maintain the relevant positions open.

- A "Stop Out" occurs when the client's Margin Level is equal to or below 100%, and the Company exercises its right to liquidate the client's open positions.

Margin Rates

The margin rates per financial instrument depend on the underlying asset's historical performance, liquidity, market capitalization, volatility, and other characteristics. The rates will also reflect the Company's risk appetite and general economic climate and factor in the margin requirements imposed by its liquidity providers.

The margin rates are subject to change from time to time. The complete and current financial instruments available for trading through our Online Trading Facility and their corresponding up-to-date ratios are available on our Online Trading Facility.

Warning: The Company reserves the right, at any moment and without notification, to increase margin rates for specific financial instruments concerning the prevailing market conditions. If possible, the Company will notify its clients within 3 (three) Business Days in writing of such changes to allow them to take appropriate measures. Changes in rates may be caused by the following:

- Expected release of major announcements (elections, referendums) or
- Periods of thin and low liquidity in the financial markets (holiday season) or
- Periods of abnormal market volatility; or
- Any other situation in which the Company believes that it justifies a change.
- You must ensure that you understand how Margin requirements are calculated.

General Provisions

- By signing this Agreement, the Client agrees, acknowledges, and accepts that he understands and comprehends how leverage and margin work, as described and shown in the Agreement.
- The Company shall evaluate the Client's knowledge and experience in trading in complex financial products, such as cfd's, and whether such is appropriate to the Client before calculating the leverage ratio. Leverage levels will then be announced from time to time at the Company's sole discretion.
- Suppose trading on a relevant financial instrument or a specific underlying asset is stopped at any time. In that case, the Company shall suspend trading in CFD Transactions based on that underlying asset and calculate the value of the CFD based on the last available to the Company price before the time of suspension. The Company shall have the right, during the length of a Transaction whose market is stopped, to terminate the Transaction at its discretion and to modify or adjust the Margin Requirement. The Company may choose a Closing Time and price for the relevant CFD in its sole and absolute discretion if the suspension mentioned above lasts for five (5) Business Days.
- Placing a stop loss order does not guarantee to limit the Client's losses to the intended amounts because the market conditions may make it impossible to fulfil such an order at the time of the request. Executing an Order at the indicated price under specific trading circumstances might not be possible. This could happen when prices change quickly, such as when the price goes up or down so much in one trading session that trading is stopped or limited by the rules of the relevant exchange. In this situation, the Company is free to fulfil the Order or adjust the Transaction's opening (closing) price at the first available price at its sole discretion.
- The Client will have no claims against the Company arising from the fact that the Client did not place an Order before the Company's cut-off time. The Company can establish cut-off times for instructions or Orders that may be earlier than the times set by the Financial Market and/or clearing house involved in any Transaction.
- In the situations described above in this Agreement, the Company is also free to decline, refuse to receive and/or transmit, or arrange for the execution of any Order, Request, or Instruction from the Client at any time and its discretion without providing the Client with any notice or justification.

- The Client recognizes that no statements were made to them by the Company or on its behalf that would have encouraged or induced the Client to engage in this Agreement.
- The Company can at any time and in its sole discretion transfer to a third party its rights and responsibilities under this Agreement. Without the Company's prior approval, the Client cannot assign and/or transfer any of its rights or duties under this Agreement to a third party. Without the Company's prior written authorization, any such alleged assignment or delegation shall be declared void.
- The Company's failure to seek remedies for violations, to insist on strict adherence to any term or condition of this Agreement, or to exercise all or part of any right or remedy to which the Company is entitled under this Agreement shall not be seen as a waiver of such rights and shall not stop the Company from later enforcing or exercising such rights.
- The regulatory framework of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines shall govern this Agreement and any business dealings between the Client and the Company, and the Company shall apply those laws in interpreting this Agreement. The available courts of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines will be the only ones to handle any disputes, lawsuits, or processes that come up because of this Agreement or have something to do with it.
- To execute the Transactions under this Agreement, the Client agrees to pay any stamp duties associated with this Agreement and any paperwork that the Company may need.

- The Company may, in its sole discretion, while making reasonable attempts for post- notification, modify Transactions, not transmit, not execute, or cancel an executed transaction if the following conditions are met:
 - a. The transactions were conducted by arbitrage/exploitation of market failure or off-market rates; and/or
 - b. A technical problem withheld the transaction from being fulfilled as desired; and/or
 - c. A liquidity provider cancelled or altered any transaction with the Company; and/or
 - d. The transaction covering failed or partially fulfilled with the liquidity provider.

You must not reverse engineer, disassemble, decompile, or otherwise attempt to discover underlying ideas, the source code, underlying user interface techniques, and/or algorithms of the Online Trading Facility by any means, directly or indirectly, nor must you disclose any of the foregoing to any person.

More specifically:

BY CLIENT

At his/her own expense, the Client shall defend, indemnify, and hold harmless the Company, its affiliates, and their respective directors, officers, employees, shareholders and agents (each an "Indemnified Party") from and against all third party claims (including without limitation claims by Client's customers), suits, proceedings, losses, costs, liabilities and expenses (including reasonable attorneys' fees) asserted or awarded against, or incurred by, the Company, which arise out of or are in any way due to or related to:

For clarity, the Company shall conclude transactions in good faith. 9. RISK EXPLANATION AND WARNING

- The Client should not invest directly or indirectly in any Financial Instrument unless the Client knows and understands all the risks involved in trading the products offered by the Company.
- Before the Client opens an account, the Client should assess his/her suitability for investing in a specific Financial Instrument according to his/her risk profile, particular circumstances, financial objectives and financial resources.
- Hazard or danger is the event or occurrence which can cause harm to an entity or a group of entities if it materialises. Thread is the condition which must occur to enable the hazard and cause the risk to appear.

Risk measures the expected hazards' effects if the thread occurs.

For example,

An operational hazard in the office is fire. The threads' classification may vary between intentional and non-intentional. Some threads include the overload of electronic systems such as computers and cables, a faulty electrical appliance, or any human error, including negligence.

Risk is the possibility of any of the threads occurring, eventually igniting a fire at the relevant department or office. The risk may vary from some hundreds of US Dollars, concerning the damage to the equipment, to many thousands, if not millions, because of the damage which will occur due to the destruction of valuable company data relating to its operations and clients, as an example. A risk mitigation measure is a fire extinguisher alarm and a training session for personnel to prevent this hazard or react if it materialises.

- The risk measures the likelihood or probability of an event with its implications or consequences, i.e., the effect.
- When the Client considers making a transaction or a set of transactions, he/she needs to consider several risk types, their possible implications and exit strategies, if necessary, i.e., the Client needs to make an informed risk assessment of his/her potential future investment decisions to manage his/her possible portfolio threats effectively.
- An investment decision combines information, risk management and money management.
- Money management is the decision-making procedure that defines the amount the Client will endanger to support his/her investment decision. Money management techniques include the maximum amount the Client is willing to lose if his investment has the inverse than expected results, i.e., the maximum drawdown.
- The Client needs to analyze the information available for investment, and after his risk assessment, he needs to decide the following:
 - Risk appetite
 - Risk tolerance
 - Risk capacity
 - Risk appetite is the initial amount that the Client is willing to lose if his investment goes wrong.
 - Risk tolerance is the second boundary, on top of his risk appetite, that the Client is willing to accept in the worst-case scenario.
 - Risk capacity is the maximum risk that the financial and social status of the Client can get.
- The Client needs to consider the amount of money he is willing to risk for his investment decision. For example, the Client with a total wealth of 100,000 US Dollars is willing to risk 10,000 US Dollars for his investments in financial instruments. The risk appetite of the client is 10,000 US Dollars. Information gathering, risk management and money management generate an outcome, the client's risk profile.

The client's risk profile measures his willingness and ability to bear risks and accept losses.

The client's risk profile plays a catalytical role in determining the proper investment allocation and the overall formation of a client's portfolio.

- The Client fully understands that the Company provides absolutely NO ADVICE on the Client's investments or other sorts of advice. The Client is solely responsible for any loss suffered. If the Client does not understand the risks involved in trading Financial Instruments offered by the Company, the Client should seek advice and consultation from an independent financial advisor. If the Client does not understand the risks involved, the Client should not trade at all. We strongly advise the Client to read our Risk Disclosure and Warnings in Appendix 3.
- The Client agrees and acknowledges that it is solely responsible and shall not rely on the Company for:
 - Any investment strategy, order, transaction or investment; and
 - The composition of any account and taxation consequences.

It is also understood and accepted that the Company shall bear absolutely no responsibility, regardless of the circumstances, for any such investment strategy, order, transaction, investment or information.

- The Client acknowledges potential financial risks when engaging in derivative trading and trading in relevant markets. This section and the entire Agreement should always be read in conjunction with our separate Risk Disclosure, which forms an integral and indivisible part thereof.
- The Client acknowledges that trading in derivatives, Foreign Exchange ("Forex"), Contracts for Differences ("cfd"), commodity futures, options, spread betting, and in such markets carries a high degree of risk and may not be suitable for him/her. Before deciding to trade in this market, the Client should carefully consider his/her financial condition, including but not limited to his/her financial commitments and/or obligations, level of knowledge and experience, investment objectives and horizon and individual risk appetite.

- The Client must at least undertake reasonable efforts to make him/herself aware of all the risks involved with this type of trading and seek advice from an independent financial advisor should he/she has any doubts. The possibility exists that he/she could sustain a loss of some or all his/her initial investment, and therefore he/she should not invest money that he/she cannot afford to lose. By using the services of the Company's Online Trading Facility and/or engaging in such trading activities as a result thereof, the Client is deemed to have undertaken reasonable efforts to make him/herself aware of all such risks.

- The Client acknowledges the inherent risks that communications by electronic means (including, without limitation, the transmission of Orders) may not reach their intended destination or may do so much later than intended for reasons outside the Company's control.
- The Client unreservedly acknowledges and accepts that regardless of any information the Company may offer, the value of any investment in Financial Instruments may fluctuate downwards or upwards, and the investment may probably become of no value.
- The Client unreservedly acknowledges and accepts that it runs a significant risk of incurring losses and damages due to the purchase and/or sale of any Financial Instrument and accepts and declares that it is willing to undertake this risk.

 - c) Suspend and/or modify the application of any or all terms of the Agreement to the extent that the Force Majeure Event makes it impossible or impractical for the Company to comply with them.
 - d) Take or omit all such actions as the Company deems appropriate in the circumstances concerning the position of the Company, the Client and other clients.
- Except as expressly provided in this Agreement, the Company shall not be liable or responsible for any claims, losses, damages, costs or expenses, including attorney's fees, caused, directly or indirectly, by any events, actions or omissions, any failure, interruption, or delay in performing its obligations under this Agreement when an event of Force Majeure causes such failure, interruption, or delay.

Recoupment of Profits and Account Recalculation Following Abusive Trading.

Where the Company determines, in its sole discretion and acting in good faith, that a Client has engaged in Abusive Trading, Prohibited Trading Strategies, or any activity intended to unfairly exploit pricing, execution, latency, system behaviour, liquidity conditions, or market mechanics, the Company may take one or more of the following actions without prior notice:

- a) Recalculate, adjust, nullify, cancel, or reverse any transactions, profits, gains, credits, equity increases, margin availability, or other benefits derived directly or indirectly from such activity;
- b) Recalculate the Client's account performance by excluding all transactions identified as abusive and determine the final account balance based on such recalculation;
- c) Offset any profits, gains, credits, or benefits derived from Abusive Trading against any losses, margin deficits, fees, charges, or other obligations incurred on the same account.

Trading activity shall be assessed on a holistic account basis. The Company does not recognize segmentation between "normal" and "abusive" trading once Abusive Trading has been identified, regardless of the sequence or timing of such activity.

Any trading activity that results in the recovery or reduction of prior losses through prohibited, abusive, manipulative, latency-dependent, execution-sensitive, or system-exploitative strategies shall be classified as Abusive Trading, irrespective of prior trading outcomes.

For the purposes of these Terms, "profit" includes any increase in account balance, equity, margin availability, or reduction of losses resulting directly or indirectly from Abusive Trading, including amounts used to offset or recover previous losses.

If, following recalculation and exclusion of abusive transactions, the Client's account balance is zero or negative, the Client shall not be entitled to any withdrawal, regardless of any positive balance displayed prior to review.

Where the funds available in the Client's account are insufficient to fully offset profits subject to recoupment, the Company may declare the account not returned in full, retain all remaining balances, and close the account. The Company is under no obligation to restore, refund, or credit any portion of the Client's initial deposit in such circumstances.

The existence of a positive account balance prior to review does not create a right to withdrawal where such balance is attributable, in whole or in part, to Abusive Trading. Public statements, complaints, or external pressure shall not affect the Company's enforcement of these Terms.

The Company's determination of Abusive Trading and any resulting recalculations shall be final and binding, provided such determination is made in good faith and in accordance with these Terms.

This clause shall prevail over any provision permitting withdrawals, including withdrawals of initial deposits, where Abusive Trading or Prohibited Conduct is identified.

18. COMPLAINTS

- If you have any complaints, please communicate them to us via e-mail as per Clause 19. All complaints are dealt with swiftly and vigorously, and relevant action is taken to ensure you have been assisted accordingly.

- Upon resolution of the query or complaint, the Company will send a final response letter to the Client, stating the nature of the resolution and applicable remedy (if any).
- The Client's complaint must include the name, the account number, the time of the complaint's origin, and if concerning a specific position, its reference number, and a brief description.
- Offensive language will not be accepted – the Company reserves the right to reject such complaints.

Appendix 2 – Complaint Handling Policy

Addressing complaints or grievances

This Policy's goal is to outline the process to be used and the proper course of action taken by the Company if a client makes a complaint.

Definitions

"Complainant" refers to anyone, natural or legal, who is qualified to file a complaint with the Company and has already done so.

"Complaint" refers to a complaint made to the Company by a complainant regarding the delivery of investment services.

The Company shall establish, execute, and maintain reasonable, prompt, and transparent systems to manage complaints and grievances received from current or prospective retail clients and maintain records of each complaint and the steps taken to resolve it.

Additionally, the Company shall implement a complaints management strategy defined and approved by the board of directors, who will monitor compliance.

The Back Office/Account Opening Department handles customer complaints or concerns initially.

However, Senior Management must approve the final resolution of non-trivial complaints or grievances.

A complainant must complete the Company-developed Complaint Form, accessible at www.connexfx.com. After being finished, it should be delivered in hard copy along with a copy of the complainant's identification document and any other supporting documentation to:

- Address: Richmond Hill Road, P.O. Box 2897, Kingstown, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines
- E-mail: support@connexfx.com and info@connexfx.com

The Company shall follow the following procedure when responding to complaints or grievances from customers:

1. A member of the Back Office/Account Opening Department is the person who deals with a complaint or grievance at first. When an employee gets a complaint or grievance, they must take the proper steps to deal with it.
2. The Back Office/Account Opening Department should send the complaint or grievance on the form to the head of the department to which it pertains as soon as possible (within three working days) after it has been received.
3. The Back Office/Account Opening Department employee must send a written acknowledgement letter informing the complainant that the complaint or grievance is being investigated and forwarded to the appropriate department or individual. The letter must include all relevant information so that the person making the complaint or grievance knows who is in charge. Along with the letter, the Company's Policy on handling client complaints must be provided to the complainant free of charge.
4. The staff member should use their best efforts to ensure that, in addition to those mentioned above, any complaint or grievance is of a nature that the Company may settle right away. This will prevent the customer from having to pursue filing a formal complaint. In such a situation, the staff member shall not:
 - i. Invest in the client in any manner possible.
 - ii. Address any problems that could prevent the best execution.
 - iii. Address any legal matters that may arise.
 - iv. Commit the Company to take any action before conducting a full investigation into the problems.

The Company's typical investigation period is five business days from the day the initial complaint is received. The complainant will be made aware of the inquiry's findings as soon as it is finished if it takes fewer than five business days to complete. The Company will provide the complainant with specific information about the reasons for the delay, the state of the investigation, and the anticipated completion date if a complaint is not resolved during the regular investigation time.

The steps to take after receiving a formal complaint or grievance

When a client sends in written complaint or grievance, they must send it to the correct department so it can be dealt with in the best way.

The client will be contacted by a back office/account opening department member to let them know their complaint or grievance has been received and is being investigated.

When we get a written complaint or grievance, we should obtain and keep the following information:

- The name and contact information of any client who has filed a complaint or grievance.
- The Company's service rendered in connection with the grievance or complaint.
- The worker in charge of rendering the services.
- The division to which the person is assigned.
- The date that the complaint or grievance was received and registered.
- The specifics of the grievance or complaint.
- The capital and market value of the client's financial instruments.
- The extent of the client's claimed damage.
- A reference to any correspondence the client and the Company may have exchanged.

Based on the data provided by the client, the events leading up to the complaint or grievance should be studied and evaluated.

The client's facts have been investigated, and it determined whether any other material must be acquired from the Company's archives (electronic mail, recorded telephone calls, IT data, and others).

All non-trivial concerns or grievances must be brought to the Senior Management's attention and approved before being resolved.

When the inquiry is finished, a report outlining the facts must be written and given to Management, who will then decide how to respond formally to the client and what action to take.

After the inquiry is complete, the Back Office/Account Opening Department employee will notify the Complainant in writing, using clear and understandable language, of the findings and the steps are taken to satiate the complainant's demand(s) promptly.

The Company must give the complainant a thorough written explanation of its stance on the complaint if the inquiry results only partially satisfy the complainant's demands.

If a customer complaint or grievance is legitimate, Management must take the required steps in collaboration with the Head of the Department or Heads of the Departments to which the complaint or grievance is related to recognize and confirm the following:

- Reasons why the treatment was not successful.
- Internal controls' shortcomings.
- Internal controls must be put in place to stop future complaints and grievances.

Senior Management must approve all proposed processes at the meeting once the inquiry is complete. The complainant will receive a summary of the procedure mentioned above through the agreement signed for the supply of investment services.

The Head of the Back Office, or his designee, is responsible for maintaining a central complaint database that contains the following details:

- The complainant's name, address, and account number (if available).
- The date the complaint was received.
- The department(s) participating in the complaint inquiry, together with the names of the personnel in charge.

- The substance of the complaint and the outcome of the complaint.

Upon receipt, the Head of the Back Office or his designee must adequately and appropriately register the complaint on an internal archive. The Company must keep all complaints and grievances on file for at least five years.

Updates

The Company will periodically review this Policy at least once per year.

Appendix 3 – Risk Acknowledgement, Disclosure and Warning

According to the terms of service and conditions controlling our contractual relationship, we give you this warning for you to acknowledge the main risks in our contractual relationship.

Risk Warning

- Clients should carefully read the following risk warnings. Please note that when dealing with Financial Instruments (including Contracts for Difference, or "CFDs"), we do not disclose or fully explain all the risks involved. We state the general dangers of trading in financial instruments fairly and honestly.
- The Company primarily offers CFDs on foreign exchange to carry out orders relating to one or more financial instruments. The Company will serve as the primary Execution Venue for executing the Client's orders.

- CFDs are intricate financial products that not all investors should use. Leveraged products known as CFDs mature when an open trade is closed. When you invest in CFDs you take on significant risk, and there is a possibility of losing all the money you invested.
- Clients should only trade if they know everything there is to know about the risks of financial instruments.
- Clients should not take on more risk than they can afford to lose. Clients should carefully examine whether Financial Instrument suits them, considering their circumstances and financial resources, before applying to open a trading account with the Company or placing an order.
- Clients should speak with an impartial financial advisor if they have questions or need help comprehending the dangers of trading financial instruments. After speaking with the advisor, they should only trade if they understand these hazards.
- Each Client must realize that there is a significant risk of loss and damage while buying and selling Financial Instruments and that the investment value may go up and down. Once clients decide to trade, they are responsible for any losses and damages, which may cause them to lose all the money they invested.

Recognition of Technical Risk

- The Company prioritizes completing orders placed by its Clients as quickly as feasible while staying within the bounds of available technology and communications channels. For example, the Client may telephone to open or close a trade. The Client should bear the risks of monetary losses brought on by the breakdown of information, communication, electronic, or any other systems.
- The Client oversees protecting his access data. The Client will be exposed to system hazards, such as hardware and software failure (Internet/Servers) if he conducts transactions on an electronic system (Trading Platform). For instance, a delay in receiving an order on the Company's platform could impact the cost of execution. Therefore, any system malfunction may have the effect of either not executing the order following the Client's instructions or not executing it at all. In the case of such a failure, the Company disclaims all liability.
- The Client agrees that during periods of high deal volume, particularly in a fast market, the Client may experience some difficulty speaking on the phone with a Dealer (for example, when key macroeconomic indicators are released).
- When trading through the Online Trading Facility, the Client oversees the risks of monetary losses brought on by:
 - Hardware or software failure, malfunction, or abuse on the part of the Client or the Company.
 - A bad Internet connection on the part of the Client, the Company, or both. This covers disruptions, blackouts in transmission, issues with the public electricity grid, connection overloads, or hacker attacks; incorrect settings in the client terminal; delayed client terminal updates; and the Client disobeying the applicable guidelines outlined in the client terminal user guide and on the company website.

Unusual Market Situations

The Client understands that the time frame for executing the Orders may be extended in abnormal market conditions.

Trading Environment

- The Client knows that there can only be one Order for execution. The "Order is locked" notice will be displayed until the first Order is processed, i.e., executed. Once the Client has sent an Order, any additional Orders from the Client are ignored.

- The Client understands that the Quotes Base of the natural/live Server is the only source of information on Quotes Flow that can be relied upon. Because the connection between the Client Terminal and the Server may be interrupted at some point, and some of the Quotes may merely not reach the Client Terminal, the Quotes Base in the Client Terminal is not a trustworthy source of Quotes Flow information.
- The Client understands that the Instruction or Request submitted to the Server will not be cancelled when the Client closes the order placing, amending, or deleting window or the position opening/closing window.
- If the Client decides to send the same Instruction again after not receiving the results of the first attempt, the Client will take the risk of executing two transactions rather than one. However, the Client can get an "Order is locked" notice. The Client acknowledges that the only instruction that will be executed is to modify the Stop Loss and/or Take Profit levels on the position opened when the Pending Order is triggered, even if the Pending Order has already been executed. The Client may simultaneously send the Instruction to modify its level and the levels of If-Done orders.

Communication

- The Client agrees to bear the risk of any monetary damages resulting from notices from the Company being delayed or not received.
- The Client understands that emails sent without encryption are not secure against unauthorized access.
- Since messages provided to the Client by the Company via the trading platform are automatically removed after 3 (three) calendar days, the Client is entirely responsible for the risks associated with those messages.
- The Client takes full responsibility for protecting the confidentiality of the information obtained from the Company and assumes all risk of monetary loss resulting from unauthorized third-party access to the Client's Account.
- When the information mentioned above is transmitted between the Company and any other party using the Internet or other network communication facilities, telephones, or any other electronic means, the Company assumes no liability if authorized or unauthorized third parties gain access to information, including electronic addresses, electronic communication, personal data, and access data.

Event of Force Majeure

The Client must accept and understand the risk of suffering financial losses in the event of a Force Majeure Event.

Foreign Exchange and Derivative Product Risk Warning Notice

1. The risks and other essential features of foreign currency and derivative products, such as Contracts for Differences, cannot be fully disclosed in this notice. If clients need to comprehend the nature of these goods and the scope of their risk exposure, they should refrain from dealing with them. Because of their risk, these products must be monitored often (especially when there is increased leverage or unpredictable markets). Additionally, customers should feel confident that the product fits their needs considering their situation and financial situation. Specific tactics, such as a "spread" position or a "straddle," may carry the same level of risk as a Long or Short position.
2. Even though the Client can use Forex and derivative instruments to manage investment risk, only some investors are fit for some of these products. Clients should only deal with derivative goods directly or indirectly if they fully understand the dangers involved and that they could lose all their money. Different instruments expose traders to varying degrees of risk, thus before choosing to trade in any instrument, a client should be aware of the following:

Leverage's Effect

1. When trading on margin, slight market changes could significantly influence the Client's trading account. It is significant to remember that leverage has an impact on every account during trading. The Client must also consider the possibility of losing all deposited funds if the market shifts against them. The Client controls all risks, financial resources used, and trading strategy selection.
2. The Client is liable for all financial losses resulting from opening a position at an error quote (spike) or a quote obtained because of a manifest error, using temporarily excess free margin on the trading account obtained because of a profitable position (subsequently cancelled by the Company).

Price movements, high volatility instruments, and slippage definition

1. Some instruments trade with volatile price fluctuations and large intraday ranges. The Client must, therefore, carefully examine the fact that there is a substantial risk of both loss and profit. The price of the underlying asset that derivative financial instruments relate to is used to determine their pricing (for example, currency, stock, metals, indices, etc.). Markets for derivative financial products and associated products can be very turbulent. The prices of the instruments and the underlying asset may move quickly over a wide range, and they can reflect unforeseen occurrences or changes in circumstances that neither the Client nor the Company can control. Losses may result if the Company cannot complete a client's order at the declared price due to specific market conditions. Changes in supply and demand, government, agricultural, commercial, and trade programs and policies, national and international political and economic events, and the relevant marketplace's dominant psychological characteristics will all affect the instruments' prices and the underlying asset. Therefore, a stop-loss order cannot guarantee the Limit of loss.

The Client understands and agrees that, despite any information provided by the Company, the value of the Instruments may change in either direction, or there is even a chance that the investment could lose all its value. This is attributable to the margining method used in such trades, which often only requires a minimum deposit or margin concerning the total contract value. The Client's deal may be adversely affected by a slight fluctuation in the underlying market. Suppose the underlying market movement is favorable to the Client. In that case, the Client may make a considerable profit. Still, an equally tiny unfavorable market movement might quickly cause the Client to lose their whole deposit and expose them to a significant extra loss.

2. It is essential to mention Slippage at this point because it typically occurs during high volatility. - This occurs when the Company fills an order at a price other than the one they anticipated for the deal to be filled. Slippage can happen in all available account and order types using any execution strategy. Positive and negative Slippage come in two varieties.

The Client should think about the potential hazards and/or hazardous situations that they might be put in since positive Slippage happens when the price is performed at a better level than the one asked; however negative Slippage is precisely the opposite circumstance.

Please be aware that in circumstances of market execution, orders will be executed at the next available price if there is market slippage. When entering or leaving the market, there are instant execution requotes (i.e., if the requested price is not available, the Company will send the current available price to the Client to confirm execution; the Client must expressly agree to accept the requoted price before execution).

3. Generally speaking, market volatility may impact the price, speed, and volume. Therefore, trading is hazardous when important news and data releases occur during volatile conditions. As the optimal execution criteria might not always be applicable, as stated on our website, the Company will always offer execution pricing at the earliest accessible price.

Liquidity

Due to decreased demand for the underlying asset, certain underlying assets might not become instantly liquid, and the Client might not be able to learn their worth or the degree of the risks involved.

Contracts for Difference

1. The non-deliverable spot transactions offered by the Company for trading CFDs provide an opportunity to profit from changes in currency exchange rates, commodities, stock market indexes, or share prices (called the underlying instrument). If the movement of the underlying instrument is favorable to the Client, the Client may make a substantial profit, but an equally modest unfavorable market movement can swiftly lead to the loss of the Client's whole deposit as well as any additional commissions and other costs paid. The Client must be willing to risk losing his invested money and any additional fees and other charges paid before engaging in CFDs.
2. The risks associated with investing in a Contract for Differences are the same as those associated with investing in a future and/or an option. The Client should be aware of these risks. Clients should be mindful of the implications of any contingent liabilities that may be included in transactions involving contracts for differences.

Off-exchange Derivatives Transactions

1. CFDs on commodities, foreign exchange, Spot Metals, shares, and indices are all off-exchange transactions. The Client understands that transactions made in CFDs with the Company are made over the counter (OTC), not on a recognized exchange, and as such, they may include higher risks than transactions on regulated exchanges. Even while some off-exchange markets have superior levels of liquidity, investing in off-exchange or non-transferable derivatives may be riskier than doing so in on-exchange derivatives because there is not an exchange market where open positions can be closed. It might be impossible to evaluate the value of a position resulting from an off-exchange transaction, to liquidate an existing position, or to evaluate the risk exposure. It is optional to quote the bid and ask prices; even when they are, the dealers in these instruments will determine them, making it challenging to determine what a fair price is.
2. The Company uses a trading platform for CFD transactions, but that does not meet the definition of a recognized exchange since it is not a Multilateral Trading Facility and, as a result, does not provide the same protection as a recognized exchange.

Markets overseas

Different dangers are present in foreign markets. Changes in foreign exchange rates will impact the possibility of profit or loss from transactions on overseas markets or in contracts using foreign currencies. The Company will explain some of the risks and protections (if any) that will apply in any international markets upon request, along with the extent to which it will take responsibility for any failure of a foreign firm with which it does business.

Investment Transactions with Contingent Liabilities

1. Margined contingent liability investment transactions call for a client to make a series of payments against the purchase price rather than making the full payment at once. The underlying asset of the instrument will determine the margin required. On the Company's website, margin requirements are listed and can be fixed or computed using the current price of the underlying instrument.
2. A client who trades CFDs risks losing all the money they deposited to open and maintain a position. They can be required to pay sizeable extra cash on short notice to retain the position if the market shifts against them. The Client will be liable for the shortfall if their position is liquidated at a loss due to their failure to deposit funds promptly. The Client should note that the Company will not be required to inform the Client of any margin call made to maintain a losing position.
3. Even if a transaction is not margined, it may be subject to a requirement to make additional payments in addition to the initial sum paid by the Client to enter the contract.

4. The Client may be exposed to significantly higher risks with contingent liability investment transactions that are not listed on or subject to the regulations of a recognized or approved investment exchange.

Collateral

The Company will manage collateral deposited by a client as security in many ways depending on the transaction type and the collateral market. Depending on whether the Client is trading off-exchange or on a recognized and/or designated investment exchange, where the regulations of that exchange apply, there may be considerable changes in how the collateral is treated. Once transactions are made on behalf of a client, deposited collateral may no longer be recognized as that Client's property. Even if the Client's deals end up being successful, they might still need to obtain the exact assets back that they put, and they might have to take reimbursement in cash.

Taxes and commissions

1. Clients should familiarize themselves with all commissions and fees for which they will be held responsible before they start trading. The Client is responsible for understanding any charges not indicated in monetary terms (but, instead, as a % of the contract value, for example). For instance, the Client may be forced to pay commission or financing costs, the amount posted on the company website, to open a position in certain cfd's. The Company may use a fixed amount and/or a percentage of the total deal value to calculate commissions. Some cfd's have a daily swap rate that fluctuates the value of opened positions throughout the contract. Swap rates are determined by current market interest rates, which are subject to change over time. The commission and financing costs are charged explicitly to the Client account rather than being included in the quoted price of any form of CFD that the Company offers.

2. The trades the Client makes in any financial instruments, including derivatives, run the risk of becoming or becoming liable to tax and/or other duties, for instance, because of changes in the law or his own circumstances. He is responsible for taxes, additional duties, fees, and expenses the Client may incur concerning his trades. The Company does not guarantee that there will not be any tax or other stamp duty due.

Interruptions in Trading

It could be difficult or impossible to liquidate a position under specific trading circumstances. This could happen, for instance, during periods of fast price movement if the price increases or decreases significantly within a single trading session to the point where trade is prohibited or restricted following the regulations of the relevant exchange. Because it may be impossible to fulfil such an Order at the desired price due to market conditions, setting a Stop Loss does not guarantee that the Client will limit losses to the amounts planned. Furthermore, a Stop Loss Order's execution may be worse than the price specified in the order and realized losses might be higher than anticipated, depending on the state of the market.

The price of the appropriate underlying asset, which the Company acquires from outside reference sources provided by third parties, is used as the basis for the Company's calculation of the price for a given CFD. The prices of the Company are listed on the website of the Company. Orders like Stop Loss, Take Profit, Buy Limit, Buy Stop, Sell Limit, and Sell Stop will be activated if the price hits them. However, there may be times when it is challenging to fulfil orders (Stop Loss, Take Profit, Buy Limit, Buy Stop, Sell Limit, Sell Stop) at the declared Clients' Price due to prevailing market conditions affecting the order and/or the transaction. Therefore, these orders only sometimes minimize Client losses in highly volatile trading conditions, such as in an underlying asset or reference price. The Company is entitled to execute the order at the earliest price. As previously mentioned, this could happen during periods of fast price movement if the price increases or decreases by such a large amount during a single trading session that trade is prohibited or restricted by the regulations of the relevant exchange. This might also happen when a trading session starts. For a specific CFD, the minimum level for placing, Buy Limit, Buy Stop, Sell Limit, Sell Stop, Stop Loss and Take Profit orders is under Contract Specifications on the Company's main website.

To give the Clients competitive price quotes, the Company generally emphasizes the quality and level of the price data it obtains from other sources. The Company does not, however, promise that its quotes will be at a price that is at least as good as one that might have been offered elsewhere.

Insolvency

1. The Company has put in place sufficient safeguards to guarantee the assets and ownership rights of the Clients in the event of the Company's bankruptcy. However, holdings could be liquidated or closed off without the Client's permission if the Company becomes insolvent or defaults on its obligations. In certain situations, a client might not receive the tangible assets that were put up as collateral and might instead have to accept any payments made in cash or by any other means deemed appropriate.
2. The protections granted by the relevant regulations will apply to segregated client funds. Any third party mentioned in this section will not have the Company responsible for their actions, solvency, or lack thereof.
3. All client funds are kept apart from company funds in segregated accounts.

Market Risk Control

1. Market risk is the possibility of financial losses when the value of investments decreases over a specific period due to occurrences or changes in the economy that have a significant market-wide impact.
2. The following categories can be used to categorize market risk:
 - Position risk is the likelihood of a trading position (long or short) losing money due to price changes.
 - Interest Rate Risk: The possibility that changes in market interest rates cause future cash flow values of a financial instrument to alter.
 - Commodities Risk: This is the uncertainty about future market values and the amount of future income brought on by changes in commodity prices. These products could include oil, metals, gas, power, etc.
 - When a financial transaction is conducted in a currency other than the Company's base currency, there is a risk of foreign exchange. Establishing and controlling foreign exchange limitations, such as determining the maximum value of exposure to a particular currency pair and applying sensitivity analysis, are effective ways for the Company to manage its foreign exchange risk.

Risk Associated with Margin Calls

- You might need to deposit more money with us quickly if the price moves against your open position to meet your total margin requirement and keep your Position open. The extra Margin's value might be significant, and if it is not paid on time, it could lead to the following:
 - Some or all of your open Positions could be cancelled or liquidated by us.
 - You could lose the ability to open new Positions or extend current Positions.
 - You could also be responsible for interest costs on negative or debit balances.
- Additionally, any additional funds must clear before they may be considered to have satisfied your margin call. In rare cases, before any additional funds you deposit in response to a margin call have the chance to turn into cleared money, your Position may be liquidated.
- You should be aware that transactions are revalued for margin purposes at their respective bid and offer prices regardless if they are long and short positions at the same instrument (hedge). The spread will be wide during times of low liquidity, high volatility, or shortly before or right after the closing or opening of markets, resulting in increased Margin obligations. Even when the Position is hedged, this could cause the liquidation of Contracts.
- Customers are advised not to rely exclusively on a Margin Call sent by the Company via the Online Trading Facility. The client is responsible for keeping track of margin requirements and ensuring they have enough free equity to cover any potential negative movement. We cannot promise that Margin Calls will be received or that there will be enough time for monies to be forwarded to avoid losses.

Margin Calls for Hedged or Partial Hedged Positions

- Clients can simultaneously hold long and short positions on the same instrument. The initial margin requirement may be decreased to zero if positions are completely hedged (long and short by the same amount).
- To determine the variation margin, all open Contracts are revalued against the bid and offer, respectively. Even though the net position might be hedged, Variation Margins will still be in effect because of the bid-ask spread.
- Variation Margins may be significant if the Spread widens during times of poor liquidity or strong volatility. If Free Equity is only a modest amount, the Liquidation Level may be triggered, closing all open Contracts.
- The open Contracts are all rolled independently and not on a net basis, as clients are hereby reminded. This indicates that even though the net open position can be zero, retaining open offsetting open Contracts results in a net cost.
- As a result, clients are urged to keep an eye on total margin requirements even when partially hedged.

Trading Platform

- Any trading platform carries operational risks, and if our Trading Platform is interrupted, you might not be able to exchange the Financial Instrument with us when you want to. Considering this, if one of our operational procedures, such as communications, computers, computer networks, software, or outside events, is delayed, you could suffer a loss. Except if it results from fraud or dishonesty on our part or the part of our employees, we accept and bear no responsibility whatsoever for the operation of the Trading Platform.
- We retain the right to halt the operation of our Trading Platform, or any element or section of it, in unexpected and extreme market circumstances. In such a situation, we reserve the right, following the Client Agreement, to close out your open positions and transactions at reasonable and fair rates.

Appendix 4 – Conflicts of Interest

Policy on Conflicts of Interest

The Company has summarized its policy below to identify and manage conflicts of interest concerning its obligations to its clients.

SERVICES AND SCOPE

- This Policy covers all dealings with all Clients and applies to all Directors, employees, suppliers, outsources, contractors, or anyone directly or indirectly related to them by control.
- This Policy aims to guarantee that the Company's conflicts of Interest are recognized, controlled, and, as appropriate, reported to ensure that all Clients are treated fairly, to lessen the risk of Client Disadvantage, and to lessen the danger of Legal Liability.
- This Policy applies to all Investment and Ancillary services the Company provides.

ASSESSMENT OF CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

- During the regular course of the Company's business and when dealing with clients, an employee, a director, an associate, or another related person may have a relationship, arrangement, or interest that is relevant to the Transaction in question or that is inimical to the interests of the Client. The following list includes situations that constitute or may constitute a conflict of interest entailing a material risk of harm to the interests of one or more Clients because of providing investment services, even though it is challenging to precisely identify or create an exhaustive list of all relevant conflicts of interest that may arise given the current nature, scale, and complexity of the Company's business activities:
 - The Company participates in the client's transactions and orders as a Principal, but it minimizes any potential conflicts of interest between the Company and the Client through its knowledge, staff, monitoring systems, and order execution arrangements. As soon as new conflicts of interest occur from time to time, the company will take corrective action and notify the client.
 - The Company may, at its discretion, combine an order from one client with another by acting on behalf of both clients.
 - In exchange for referring new clients or, if applicable, for the clients' trading, the Company may earn or pay inducements to or from third parties.
 - Ad hoc transactions may be conducted by the Company via related partners.
- The Company considers the following factors when determining whether a conflict of interest exists or might exist:
 - Is it conceivable that the Company or any connected parties will experience a financial gain or avert a loss at the Client's expense?

- Has the Company, or anyone connected to it, an interest in the outcome of the service rendered to the Client that is distinct from that of the Client?
- Is there a financial or another incentive for the Company or any connected parties to favour the interests of one client (or group of clients) over those of another?
- Does the Company and/or any of its affiliates engage in the same line of work as the Client?
- Does the Company and/or any of its affiliates receive anything from a third party other than the regular commission or charge for that service in the way of an enticement (such as gifts or services)?

CONFLICT OF INTEREST MANAGEMENT

- Conflicts of interest are controlled and constantly watched if they are discovered. The Company's Senior Management is responsible for managing and overseeing any identified conflict of interest.
- Conflicts of interest are managed using the following policies and controls:
 - There is no connection between the compensation of opposing sides of a potential conflict-of-interest activity.
 - Sufficient procedures are in place to stop or regulate information sharing between departments and individuals involved in activities where a conflict of interest could occur.
 - Steps are taken to avoid improperly interfering with how a connected person performs investment or ancillary services.
 - When there is a potential conflict of interest, individual supervision should be used on those on the opposing sides.
 - Separating tasks that, if performed by the same person, could lead to conflicts of interest.
 - Existence of an internal policy governing the company's disclosure of proprietary or sensitive information.
 - The existence of an internal policy on gifts and inducements prohibits employees from accepting gifts and inducements from parties important to a transaction.
 - Existence of specific guidelines and restrictions for company employees' business dealings to prevent conflicts of interest
- The company continuously monitors business operations to ensure that internal controls are appropriate. Every year, the Compliance Department is committed to reviewing actual and prospective conflicts and how they are handled or lessened. The review evaluates trends and concerns originating from conflicts between the present regulation controlling the Company's Business activities and the Company's policies and advises the Board of Directors appropriately.
- To ensure that the proper systems and controls are upheld, the company also appoints internal auditors, who submit reports to the company's board of directors.

CONSENT OF CLIENT

The Client agrees to all the terms of this Policy by entering a contractual relationship with the Company to provide Investment and/or Ancillary Services. Furthermore, despite any conflicts of interest or substantial interests in a Transaction, the Client agrees and grants permission to deal with the Company in any way the Company deems suitable without consulting the Client. The Client will be contacted if the Company cannot resolve a conflict-of-interest problem.

COMMUNICATION OF INFORMATION

Any potential conflicts of interest shall be disclosed to a client (prospective client) before the company begins doing business with them. The decision to begin a commercial connection with the Company will be up to the potential Client.

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST REPORTING

Our employees should generally be aware of potential conflicts of interest. Any employee who suspects a conflict of interest must immediately notify their direct supervisor to receive assistance in determining whether there is a material risk of harm. They must also send a Conflict-of-Interest Notification Form filled out in full, along with all the necessary information to allow regulatory scrutiny of the employee's corrective and preventative actions, their justification for taking them, any conditions they were given, whether there are any still-current conflicts, and how they are being handled.

ASSURANCE AND OWNERSHIP

This Policy is periodically reviewed to account for changes to operations or procedures and ensure that it remains suitable for any changes in the law, technology, and business environment. Changes will be noted when the document is republished so that the staff knows the updates. The Compliance Officer oversees the ownership and upkeep of this Policy.

If any changes to the policy in the interim, they will either be edited within the body of the policy or, if significant, added to the guidance document's appendices following current procedures. Then, when the Policy is evaluated, these appendices will be combined into it as necessary. The document's body will then be edited to refer to the appropriate appendix to clarify the changes.

INDEPENDENCE FOR CONFLICT-OF-INTEREST MANAGEMENT

There may be circumstances where it is necessary to manage conflicts of interest by asking our employees to uphold and adhere to a particular level of independence.

Our company has adopted the following measures to guarantee the necessary level of independence:

- Measures (such as establishing a "Chinese wall") to prevent or limit information sharing between relevant individuals engaged in activities that pose a conflict-of-interest risk.
- Individual supervision of relevant individuals whose primary responsibilities include acting on behalf of or providing services to our clients whose interests may conflict or who otherwise represent multiple interests that may conflict, including the Company. The Dealing Room, a department of our company that might have a conflict with our clients, is closely watched to ensure that any direct connections between the compensation of relevant people who are primarily engaged in one activity and the compensation of other relevant people who are primarily engaged in another activity, where a conflict of interest may arise, are eliminated.
- Employees of the Dealing Room are not compensated based on our client's performance; instead, safeguards are in place to prevent or curtail anyone from exerting improper influence on how a relevant person performs their duties.
- Measures to restrict or control the concurrent or sequential involvement of a relevant person in different services or activities, such as the receipt and delivery of client orders, may also be taken by the person who determines or influences an individual's bonus.

Appendix 5 - Best Execution Policy & Order Handling

Scope of Policy

This Policy describes our method for executing orders, from order initiation to execution, and the execution venue utilized by the Company. In addition, the Policy describes how the various criteria influence our approach to achieving the best possible outcome while executing client orders. The primary purpose of this Policy is to help clients understand how the Company executes client orders so they may make an informed decision about whether to employ the Company's services. This disclosure statement is included in our terms of service. By accepting the provisions of the applicable Client Agreement, the Client also consents to the terms of our Order Execution Policy and Order Handling (henceforth, the "Policy"), as outlined in this document.

Specific Instructions

If a client provides specific instructions about order execution or transmission, the Company will execute the orders following those instructions. Clients must be aware that the supply of specific instructions may impede the Company's ability to implement its policy and achieve the best possible result for the execution or transmission of an order.

The purpose of the Policy

This policy is meant to tell you about Connex LLC's order execution policy and how it works consistently to get you the best possible result when fulfilling client orders.

This document is essential to the Terms of Service and Conditions and Agreement of Connex LLC. By accepting the Agreement's provisions, you are also presumed to agree to the terms of the Execution Policy, as outlined in this policy.

We must be honest, fair, and professional when we talk to you and keep your best interests in mind. Connex LLC will take all reasonable steps to obtain the best possible outcome when executing Orders for financial instruments, considering its Execution Policy and any special instructions you provide. Nevertheless, the Execution Policy cannot ensure that the price at which Connex LLC authorizes you to send an Order will always be the best worldwide. Subject to any specific instructions you may provide, we will make every effort to achieve the best possible outcome for our clients, considering the Execution Factors indicated below.

Definitions

- Execution Venue refers to a Regulated Market, an MTF, a Systematic Internalize, a market maker, other liquidity providers, or an entity that performs a function comparable to any preceding.
- A multilateral Trading Facility (MTF) is a multilateral system administered by an investment firm or market operator that brings together numerous third-party purchasing and selling interests in Financial Instruments – in the system and follows non-discretionary rules to produce a contract.
- Regulated Market refers to a multilateral system administered and/or managed by a market operator that brings together or enables the bringing together of numerous third-party purchasing and selling interests in Financial Instruments in compliance with the system's non-discretionary rules.
- Financial Instruments admitted to trading following its rules and/or systems, which are authorised and routinely operational.
- Systematic Internaliser is an investment firm that executes customer orders outside of a regulated market or MTF on a regular, frequent, and systematic basis for its own account.

- Elements of Execution and Order Types the Company's trading platform is MetaTrader 5 (MT5), which are offered by "MetaQuotes."
- Market execution indicates that the order is executed based on the Market's depth. There are requotes with Market Execution, and orders are completed at the best market price.
- Slippage is the gap between the desired and current market rates, which might be favorable or unfavorable to the Client. The discrepancy may occur if the desired rate is no longer accessible due to the Market's quick movement. The Company does not intervene manually in any form.
- A market order is an order to execute a trade at the best available price. A market order may experience slippage.
- A pending order is a request to purchase or sell a financial item at a predetermined price. The pending order is executed at the next best available rate when the Market reaches the predetermined rate.
 - A buy limit order necessitates that the pre-defined rate is lower than the current market rate, whereas a sell limit order necessitates that the pre-defined rate is greater than the current market rate.
 - A buy-stop order requires the pre-defined rate to be greater than the current market rate, while a sell-stop order demands the opposite.
- Stop loss is usually the request to close an open position when the market moves in the opposite direction of the Open Position. Once the Market reaches the predetermined stop loss rate, the market order is executed at the next best available price.
- Take Profit is usually a request to close an open position when the market moves in the trader's favour. Once the Market reaches the predetermined take-profit rate, the market order is executed at the next best available rate.
- Stop-out happens when the margin level (per cent) for all accounts falls to or below 100% unless agreed differently between the Parties of the Agreement. The system will then begin closing some or all open market orders, beginning with the least profitable.
- Price gap shall be defined as follows:
 - The first Bid of the current trading session is more than the last Ask of the previous trading session or
 - The first Ask of the current trading session is less than the last Bid of the previous trading session.
- Requote occurs when the price requested by a client for the execution of an order is not available, and the Company requotes the current available price to the Client for proceeding with the execution of an order. The Organization does not requote orders.
- Negative balance protection is given for all the Company's retail accounts. If the Retail Client's account balance becomes negative after all open positions have been closed, the Company will cover the negative balance and will not collect payment from clients. The Negative balance protection does not apply to any other category of clients, such as Professional clients.

Price; costs; speed; the possibility of execution and settlement; size; nature, and any other consideration pertinent to the execution of the order shall be regarded as Execution Factors.

For Retail clients, the optimal result will be based on the total consideration payable (minus our fees), which represents the price of the financial instrument and execution costs. If you are not a Retail Client, we may consider that other Execution Factors, other than pricing, are more relevant for achieving the best possible execution outcome.

Our fees may be applied as a markup or a markdown (the difference between the price we take a principal position and the transaction execution price with you). Alternatively, we may agree to charge a commission, markup, markdown, or a mix thereof. Our fees are not factored into the determination of the best execution pricing.

Price

The price used to fulfil an order from the market. Multiple liquidity providers supply pricing feeds to the Company. Price discovery is crucial, particularly during atypical market conditions and periods of excessive volatility. We assure the availability of various price feeds to give our clients the best bid and ask prices. Our "Spread" is the difference between our Bid and Ask prices. Our Spreads will help the delivery of competitive Ask and Bid pricing.

Costs

In addition to Connex LLC's Spread, the Client may incur additional fees if the order is executed in a particular manner. The Overnight Rollovers (Swaps) and Swaps are part of the initial fulfilment of an order, if available. When market orders are held overnight, overnight rollovers (swaps) are assessed. Financing Fees for all types of instruments offered by the Company are not included in the price quoted. Only on weekdays does the Company collect a fee, which is tripled on Wednesdays. Commissions are also applied to specific CFD instruments that can be seen on our website. Spreads are also a cost that traders must bear. The Company's spreads are dynamic and influenced mainly by the volatility of the financial instrument's underlying market. These are checked in real-time and compared to the prices of other independent pricing suppliers for any significant deviations.

Size and Nature

The way Connex LLC executes a particular order (such as one greater than the typical market size) may vary from how it executes a standard transaction. The company endeavors to fulfil and execute all orders placed by clients, regardless of their size, while reserving the right to reject any request as outlined in its Client's Agreement/Terms and Conditions. Nonetheless, the Company may complete large orders at the most excellent possible pricing for that order size instead of the client's preferred price.

Speed of Execution

Speed of execution is crucial and can be especially significant in volatile markets. This can be especially crucial in markets that change rapidly. To reduce Latency, we maintain high-speed connections over several servers, and our execution is fully automated to ensure seamless order execution. The Latency has a detrimental impact on execution speed. It is the time required for the Company's trading servers to respond to a client's request. As a result, the Company regularly checks its Latency and investigates unacceptable delays. In addition, the speed can be affected by the volatility of the underlying financial instrument, the availability of trade sizes at the desired price, the response of the Liquidity Provider (if applicable), and the underlying market conditions at the time (crisis, extreme volatility) The Company aims to attain the quickest possible execution speed within the given conditions. Note that the CLIENT is solely responsible for any delays in "transmitting the order to the Company" resulting from internet connectivity issues, hardware malfunction, wireless disconnections, or a lack of signals.

Likelihood of execution and settlement

The possibility of execution is crucial, as the price of execution is contingent on the Company's capacity to execute the order.

ConnexT LLC may be unable to execute the order at the best available price, or the transaction may fail to complete, as detailed below. Although the Company strives to fulfil all client orders, it maintains the right to decline or fulfil the order at the first available market price. The company endeavors to fulfil all client orders but maintain the right to deny, partially fill, or execute orders at the earliest available market price without justifying the client. Upon successful execution of a client's order, the Company immediately processes the settlement of the client's orders.

Market impact

The potential market impact of executing a client's order or displaying it to other market participants.

All prices received from liquidity sources are subjected to automated assessments to determine their acceptability considering current market conditions (i.e., under regular non-hectic price movements). If the price falls outside of predetermined parameters setting a high threshold, these quotes are filtered to prevent incorrect pricing from being passed to clients; once this anomaly is investigated further to a trigger/alert compared to underlying market conditions, the price is passed to clients (if it is deemed correct) or filtered out if it is determined to be incorrect due to a technical error.

The fact that the organization aggregates incoming prices from multiple liquidity providers considerably reduces the likelihood that clients will receive inaccurate quotes, ensuring optimal execution.

Additionally, the company has real-time systems as part of its BEST EXECUTION capabilities to monitor live price streaming between the quotes received by the company's clients and other independent quotes streamed by other liquidity providers. Whenever there is a significant variation, an alarm is raised, and the relevant quote/price of the relevant financial instrument is further reviewed to determine if it impacted clients so that the appropriate rectifications can be implemented.

Execution Criteria

The Execution Criteria to be examined are:

- i. The client's attributes, such as their retail or professional categorization.
- ii. The specifics of the client's order, including price and quantity.
- iii. The ConnexTFX instrument being traded and the underlying market's liquidity (e.g., for Trades outside the average trading size)
- iv. Speed and probability of execution

Execution Venues

Subject to any specific instructions you may provide, we may transmit an order to a third-party broker or dealer for execution at one and/or more Execution Venues. In doing so, we must look out for our best interests and consider the things and criteria discussed in the last section.

The Company acts as a principal rather than an agent on behalf of the client. Client orders are not executed on a Trading Venue (Regulated Market, Multilateral Trading Facility, or Organised Trading Facility); instead, they are executed by the Company as the single major execution venue for all Client Orders, as stated above. The Company does not outsource its execution responsibilities to any other execution venue and retains the obligation to provide its clients with the best execution.

Our Prices and Where They Come From

Each CFD we offer is quoted with a two-way price. This two-way price consists of a Bid and an Ask.

Our "Spread" is the difference between our Bid and Ask prices. The Spread comprises our expenditures for providing you with services. We guarantee that our Spreads provide you with competitive Bid and Ask prices. Our Spreads are varied, and we publish our average on our website.

Throughout the day, a variable Spread will fluctuate based on market volatility and available liquidity. They are the best bid-ask prices we can receive from our liquidity providers, the underlying regulated markets, or other data feeds.

We reserve the right to modify Spreads to reflect actual or prospective periods of higher market volatility in the prices of underlying financial instruments and/or other market volatility induced by political or economic events. If we want to change the spreads, we will inform you in at least three business days. The only exception is if to protect our interests, we must act quickly to reflect sudden, unexpectedly high market or instrument volatility.

Our CFDs prices are generated from the prevailing ("published") market prices of the underlying financial instruments in the relevant markets where those instruments may be traded or from other applicable third-party data vendor sources. We make every effort to obtain the lowest possible costs for our clients.

In the case of Foreign Exchange, when there is no established or controlled market from which to acquire prices, we ensure that we obtain price feeds from global investment banks and/or other key price feed sources.

Multiple reliable liquidity or price feed sources provide ConnEXT LLC with price feeds. It is essential to have many liquidity providers so that clients can get competitive prices, especially when the market is very volatile, or there are other unusual market conditions.

If applicable, we shall avoid structuring or charging our commissions in a manner that unfairly discriminates amongst Execution Venues.

Annually, we examine our selection of data suppliers to determine their eligibility for this Policy.

As a result of these factors, our stated prices will be close to, but not identical to, the underlying market Bid and Ask values. The Company will not provide pricing outside of its posted business hours.

Order Handling

Trading and order execution are available during the hours specified on our trading platforms ("Trading Hours") and website.

Clients may place trades and orders during Trading Hours on our trading platforms. Please note that the Company can only execute orders within the Trading Hours mentioned on the trading platforms for each CFD.

All active orders (whether stop-loss or take-profit (limit) orders against open positions) are executed based on our quoted published price. A Sell order will be generated if our Bid price meets the given order price. A Buy order will be activated if our Ask price meets or surpasses the set order price.

Detailed Client Instructions

When you provide precise directions for the execution of an order, we shall follow those instructions. Where your precise instructions pertain to only a portion of the order, we shall continue to apply our order execution policy to the other components.

You should be aware that giving us explicit instructions regarding the execution of an order may prevent us from following the processes outlined in our order execution policy to achieve the best possible outcome for the elements covered by those instructions.

Notably, we cannot guarantee the execution price of orders, i.e., these prices are non-guaranteed (unless otherwise explicitly stated). We make every effort to execute orders at or near the provided pricing. Due to price fluctuations in the underlying Financial Instruments, our prices may fluctuate rapidly and irregularly. This is referred to as gapping. It can occur during times of low liquidity and excessive volatility (for example, after a profit warning by a corporation whose shares you may be invested in via the CFD or immediately after the release of economic data).

You should be aware of the following risks associated with turbulent markets, particularly at or near the opening or closing of a typical trading session:

- Execution of your order at a price materially different from the quoted Bid or Ask price or the last reported price at the time of your order placement, as well as partial executions or execution of big orders in many trenches/transactions at different values.
- Opening prices may be significantly different from the previous day's close.
- Exchanges, data suppliers, and Connext LLC are subject to system capacity restrictions.

Negative Balance Protection

We offer Negative Balance Protection to every retail client. This means a client can never lose more than the amount initially committed. In the case of a sudden movement and/or gap in the price of the derivative (CFD) on which you have open positions, your Margin Level could fall below 100% without the system having the ability to liquidate your position at that level. Your position will be sold at the next available price, leaving your account with a negative balance. The negative balance will be refunded to your Account in this instance.

Off-market price/spike

In the event of an off-market price entering our system due to a technical issue or misquotation, should you open any position at such price, the Company reserves the right to cancel your position by closing it at the current price offered on the relevant trading platform and reversing any Profit or Loss generated from this action. Suppose your already opened position is closed at an off-market price, either by you or by automatic Stop Loss or Take Profit orders, or your position is liquidated because of the off-market price. In that case, the Company will reverse any Profit or Loss and reinstate your position at its initial opening price.

Abusive trading

Because streaming delivery is so automated, trading prices, wrong price quotes, and technical problems can happen from time to time.

If you execute trading strategies with the intent (in the Company's reasonable judgement) of exploiting such misquotations or technical difficulties or acting in bad faith, Connext LLC will consider such conduct to be abusive.

If Connext LLC determines, in its sole discretion and good faith, that you are taking advantage of, profiting from, seeking to benefit from, or benefiting from such misquotation or technical difficulties, or engaging in any other inappropriate or abusive trading practices, such as:

- Fraud/illegal acts.
- Orders made based on prices that have changed because of mistakes or breakdowns in the online trading facility

- Scalping means trading quickly by placing and cancelling orders or entering positions for short periods, usually less than five minutes.
- Arbitrage trading based on the prices provided by our platforms due to system failures and/or delays.
- Transactions coordinated by connected parties to capitalize on system failures and delays in system updates.
